SPAIN AND JERUSALEM

A STORY OF THE TWELFTH CENTURY.

Translated from the German for THE HEBREW.

CHAPTER XVII.

A lively scene was going on upon the Alameda of Cordova. The sun was sinking in the west, and the inhabitants in the city taking advantage of the evening's coolness were enjoying their usual promenade.

Riders of both sexes, mounted on their fiery steeds and prancing up and down, sometimes at a walk and at others in a swift gallop, so that it was dangerous to cross their way; while the foot paths to the right and left were filled with people of all ranks and conditions, and of various ages.

Now and then might be heard the melodious strains of a harp issuing from the neighborhood of the residence of some noble, and to which various voices sung more or less harmoniously; everywhere there was to be heard the murmur of conversation interrupted with laughter and sounds of merriment.

The promenade grounds extended to the royal palace, around which was a large circular garden replete with flowers and plants. The promenaders walked about this place and then would return to the other terminus. The throng had reached its greatest height when a chair was seen to pass from the palace and making its way through a portion of the multitude, was borne into a side street running parallel with the Alameda. At length the people returned to their homes and soon the thoroughfare which had before presented such a bright and lively appearance, assumed a dark and gloomy aspect. The sedan was followed by a single servant.

Exhausted by the efforts of her scene with Arthur, Hulda had remained behind in her room. Her agitation in her breast had partly subsided and she began to feel more at ease than she had been for many days, for she was conscious of having acted rightly, and now that the ordeal had been passed, she was calm and contented. Nevertheless she feared concerning the knight, his manner of departure convinced her that his anger would not end here, and she had a presentiment that he would soon attempt some rash and perhaps fearful act. Thus buried in deep reflection, she was aroused by the servant of the queen, who stated that her mistress wished her company.

Hulda hastened to obey the queen, and there entering into a conversation concerning various matters, she soon forgot the troubles of the day. The queen interested herself greatly in the condition of the Israelites, and would often listen for hours to her favorite, as the latter related to her the history and the manners of her people. Hulda, as we have seen, had taken great pains to instill into the heart of his daughter a deep veneration for the practices of her religion and unbounded love for her co-religionists. Thus Hulda was fully qualified to converse upon this matter, and knowing the many natural gifts of mind which she possessed and which served to add to the force of her conversational powers, it was no wonder that the queen was often interested and delighted in listening to the words of her protégée.

After a few hours the maiden departed for home. Deep quiet, reigned in the deserted streets which were only now and then disturbed by the passage of some vehicle.

Occupied with her own thoughts she was silently borne along in the sedan, when suddenly from the threshold of a neighboring mansion rushed a young man with drawn sword followed by several servants. He haughtily ordered the bearers of the chair to halt, with violence dashed open the door, and then it was that the frightened maiden beheld the knight of Beaumont before her. "Hulda," cried he, "I am here to ask you again whether you will accompany me to the tournament; and you must not only promise, but swear it by all that you regard holy, or by the saints above, you will never leave my hands. I will bear you away!" Hulda kept her presence of mind, and in a firm tone said: "Sir knight are you aware what you are doing? To attack a helpless woman is as dangerous as it is cowardly, and if the king—"

"Away with your reproaches and threats," interrupted the cavalier, "I care nothing for them. Be the consequences whatever they may, I am determined to do as I have said, you must either give me the oath or I—"

"I will do nothing," shouted Hulda, now greatly enraged, "I belong to another and I shall be faithful to him."

"Well, then, permit the sedan to proceed," spoke a loud voice close by, "you will not disturb the peace of this city, I hope, at this time of night; allow my betrothed Hulda Hallevi to go her way, she has no business with you."

"Ha, ha, so then you are Abraham Aben Ezra," laughed the knight turning to the speaker "are you aware whom you are addressing, away with you if you do not wish to be sent to your maker!"

Abraham without seeming to pay any attention to the threats of the young man, quietly placed himself before the trembling Hulda. He held in his hand a large and heavy club, with which he intended to shield himself from the fury of the knight. The latter, mad with rage swung his sword in the air and directed a heavy blow towards Abraham. But Aben Ezra was not ignorant of the art of fencing, and with but a slight effort, he warded off the thrust, and the sword passed through the club and entered his arm.

At this moment, urged by loud cries of help and murder, a number of men headed by Juda were seen hastening to the scene of conflict. The knight observing their approach, endeavored to seize the partly insensible maiden; but Abraham threw himself before him and having seized him by his arm prevented the knight from further using his sword.

In the meantime the people approached and as new persons began to issue from the neighboring dwellings, Arthur tore himself from the grasp of Abraham, and with curses of his lips hurried away.

Moses, who was among those that had come up, lifted the wounded Abraham into the sedan, Hulda seated herself beside him, and in a few moments as if nothing had occurred the sedan was borne along to the house of Hallevi.

Aben Ezra's wound was not a dangerous one, but he had lost much blood in the affray and he was therefore confined a long time to his bed.

Hulda blamed herself for all that had taken place, for she could not but confess that it was on account of her imprudence that he had risked his life a second time for her.

She passed many hours that night in deep reflection in her room, and would receive no consolation from her father, who noticed her depression. The next morning, however, she hastened to the room wherein Aben Ezra lay, falling on her knees beside his couch she moistened his outstretched hand with her tears.

"Will you ever forgive me, Abraham?" said she, "can you ever bear any esteem for me. Do you still love me?"

"Why do you ask, Hulda? I am sure it has not been your fault that danger has surrounded you! Let us be grateful to God that He has protected us from the violence of our enemies. Let us be happy in the knowledge of our love for each other and forget the past."

Hulda started up and embraced him. She was speechless with emotion.

"See my Hulda?" whispered he, "I have at last won you, I noticed the knight's love for you; and I would not interfere. I allowed you to go your way, but with the aid of your cousin Moses, watched every step of the cavalier. Thus it was that I was enabled to arrive in time to render you assistance. Now it is all past and we understand each other, and I know that you will always love me as I have you."

At this happy moment Juda entered the room; at a glance he took the state of things, and saw that his desires had been fulfilled; he approached the happy pair, and placing his hands upon their heads, blessed them. He was rejoiced—but why did his eyes move so restlessly and his brow appear so cloudy.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The news of the attack upon Hulda, by Arthur of Beaumont, soon spread through the city, and finally reached the ears of the king, Alfonso, whether on account of his insult which had thus been cast upon him, or whether he saw in this adventure a good opportunity for reprimanding the Knight Templars, was very indignant at the action of Arthur. At a late hour a royal messenger hastened to Juda, and requested him to come before the king.

"Have I heard rightly," cried Alfonso to him, "that in this city of Cordova, a hireling of this haughty Order, has dared to attack a maiden, who had just before left the presence of the queen?" And that, too, within a hundred paces of my palace. You have now discovered Juda, through your own experience, what kind of people these Knight Templars are, and how that they care nothing for law or order. I hope that you will now see what would happen if we should concede to this riotous faction a single inch of Spanish soil. It is fortunate, however, that we have discovered them in time. We will now countermand all our promises. And in addition, I command you to inform this embassy of Knights, to leave Cordova within three days, or else a severe punishment will be meted out to them. I look to you to see that my will is carried out."

He had spoken and before Juda could find time to answer, the king left the apartment.

On this account it was that the brow of Juda Hallevi appeared so overclouded on the morning when he entered the room of Abraham. But it was neither the words of the king, nor the fact that the treaty with the order had been broken so suddenly, through the last act of a headstrong youth, that tormented the mind of Juda, but a thought more important than all these, was the prime cause of his agitation. When he reflected upon the fate of his brethren in Jerusalem, when he thought of the severe punishment which would be meted out to them by the Grand Master, when he thought of the failure of the mission of the order should reach the holy city, his heart was moved with sympathy, and he grieved that he could not ward off the penalty. His soul was too much attached to the Holy City of his forefathers, where once stood the Temple of the Lord, and where the prophets uttered in songs of praise the name of God, to be indifferent to the condition of his co-religionists there. He was too well acquainted with the iron will of the Grand Master not to know that he would carry out his threats. And besides the fact that the mission of the embassy was thwarted through the daughter of Juda, he felt would be an additional cause for resentment to the order.

Occupied with such emotions and thoughts, Juda entered the room of Abraham, the following morning. What he there saw, of course consoled and overjoyed him, but still it did not entirely banish the cloud from his heart. He had determined to consult with Abraham upon the subjects of his troubles; but when he observed the happiness of the young man, and also his exhausted and wearied condition, on account of the wound he had received the day before, Juda changed his purpose. Abraham was soon thereafter seized with a severe fever which confined him to his bed for several days. Hulda during all this time, did not leave his side.

Juda Hallevi in the meantime proceeded to fulfill the order of the king, and, accompanied by his secretaries and servants, he left his house and proceeded to the large mansion, before which Beaumont had attacked Hulda. He entered the dwelling, and having caused himself to be announced to Lord Hersford, the chief of the embassy, he entered his presence.

Juda found the latter seated at a table, poring over a manuscript. The usual civilities having been passed, Hallevi in a polite and gentle tone as was possible, informed the Knight of the Royal commands that they were to leave the city within three days, and also of the cause of this sudden interruption of their negotiations.

The Knight took the parchment upon which was written the knight's decree, and said, measuredly: "Neither of us are in the least to blame for this failure. It is bad when the work of earnest men is destroyed by the follies of children. Nevertheless the result will come upon all who are concerned therein. You understand, I say upon all."

Juda comprehended his meaning and answered: "You have said, Sir Knight, that it is wrong to have the work of men interfered with by others; would it not be equally cruel to mete out punishment to those who are not in fault?"

"What mean you, Juda?" "Well, if you will have it so, I shall speak plainly. What I mean is this: for what reason should my co-religionists in Jerusalem suffer punishment, because the negotiation here have been interrupted contrary to our desire and without any fault on our part?"

"Whatever the Grand Master has threatened," replied Hersford, "I fear he will carry out. Besides, all unbelievers should long since have been driven from the holy city. Nevertheless, we wished to consult the divine will in this respect, and note its decision through the success or failure of our mission to the King of Spain, and thus see whether the Lord desires your brethren to tarry any longer in Zion. How it has been decided, we all know too well."

"Hold, not so fast," said Juda; "I think that the fate of my co-religionists is not yet decided. I am ready to pay the sum of 30,000 golden guilders to your order, provided it promises to permit the Jews to remain in Jerusalem."

The old Knight started back in astonishment; that such an enormous sum of money should be offered by a private individual, and accompanied as it was with such generosity, such a self-sacrificing spirit, caused him to gaze silently upon Juda for some moments.

"You have a large heart, Hallevi," said he at length; "you make great sacrifices for your co-religionists, and I will lay your offer before our Grand Master—the result will soon be heard."

A few more words were exchanged and Juda departed. But he left not with a contented heart. He felt that he had acted hastily; he had gone too far, and that he had surrendered himself into the hands of his enemies. Instead of hope, fear filled his heart, and in place of the consciousness of success, he was overwhelmed with despair and remorse.

At the end of a few days his fears were confirmed. The Knight Templars left the city and early in the morning on the fourth day three men entered the room of Hallevi. They informed him that he had been accused of having offered to the enemies of the king large sums of money towards paying the martial expenses, in order to avert punishment from his co-religionists.

An examination of the validity of these charges were about to take place, and in the meantime the king had consented that he should remain imprisoned, provided he would not leave his house.

Severe times had come upon the family of Juda. His enemies did all that was possible to ruin him; but the happiness of his children Hulda and Abraham, together with the pleasant moments passed in discussions with Aben Ezra, brought comparative peace and consolation to his heart.

[TO BE CONCLUDED IN OUR NEXT.]

BAGDAD.—A very interesting examination of the School founded at Bagdad by the Universal Israelitic Alliance, conducted by Monsieur Marx, took place on the 3d of April. All the authorities of the town were present, as were also His Excellency, the Governor General of Irak, Prince Mouza Kohn, the brother of the Shah, the military commander of the province accompanied by his superior officers, the British and French Consuls, and various other public officials as also the elite of the Jewish community. The affair made a great sensation in the town. Many of the high functionaries rode to the school on horses with trappings of gold and silver. The school was beautifully decorated. The Governor himself examined the children in the Turkish language, and Colonel Herbert, the British Consul, examined them in English. They were then examined in various other branches, French, Arithmetic, Cosmography, History and Geography.

The examiners were highly delighted with the results. The Governor called one of the notabilities of the Jewish community and expressed his gratification in warm terms of approval. The brother of the Shah, on withdrawing, gave a present of money to be distributed among the pupils. The British Consul expressed great satisfaction at the mode in which the pupils pronounced the English.

This is one among many of the excellent results of the labors of the Universal Israelitic Alliance.

EXTRACT FROM THE PRINCIPAL COMMITTEES OF THE ALLIANCE ISRAELITTE UNIVERSELLE.

1st HALF-YEAR 1870.

This committee instituted by the Universal Israelite Alliance for the purpose of succoring the Israelites in the West of Russia, has already explained its object by means of a document published by it at its creation, giving a resume of the causes from whence springs the misery it was called on to relieve as also the best means of remedying the same.

In accordance with the opinions then enunciated, which opinions were fully ratified by the Central Committee of the Universal Israelite Alliance, the Koenigsberg Committee proposed to itself the following line of action:

1st. The organization of an emigration-scheme for the purpose of sending the Israelites out of the western part of Russia.

2nd. The favoring of instruction amongst the youth of both sexes in Russia by means of schools and by placing the children as apprentices with good workmen.

Laterly the Committee, in accordance with the appeal forwarded on the 20th of March 1870 by the Alliance, took upon itself the charge of selecting the orphans adopted by communities or private persons and sending them in a fitting manner to their several destinations.

After the necessary and indispensable preliminaries the Committee began its public action in the month of December 1869 and now, after the expiration of six months, it feels itself called on to render an account of the result of its labors during that time.

A statement of its situation will give a just idea of what it has done and of the difficulties which it has to encounter. These difficulties are inherent to the work and must be met with courage and perseverance.

It was necessary in the first instance to form an organization for which we had no model and but little preparation, and to find out by experience alone the surest, the most efficacious and at the same time the most practical means of action.

Every body who knows the extent of our task and the circumstances by which it was surrounded, will, we think, readily admit that it was next to impossible to do more than we have done.

We have to keep up relations with a great number of communities as well in America as in Europe; it falls to our lot to examine the condition of an immense population spread over a vast extent of country, whose mode of life, manners and language present certain obstacles which however must be got over; we have, we say, to make a proper selection out of this population, to send some of them to America, to take care of the orphans until such time as we can send them on to the different towns and villages which adopt them, and even then our surveillance over them continues to a certain extent. In addition we have to place a considerable number of workmen-apprentices, school-boys and students which takes up a considerable amount of time and resources.

We have no pretension to say that our arrangements have been always the best that might have been made. Like everything terrestrial, our mode of action is capable of perfection. Any counsel that may come us from those in a position to give it, will be weighed and discussed.

Nevertheless we firmly believe that thanks to our exertions we have done a work that entitles us to the full confidence of our co-religionists.

The following is a summary of our labors and our manner of procedure.

A.—EMIGRATION.

From the 25th of December up to the 30th of June 1870 we have sent out of the country: 213 persons composing 55 families and 158 persons single adults, making in all 371 persons.

We have sent to Constantinople 1 person.
Frankfort, M. 1
Hull 9
Leeds 1
London 32
Manchester 14
New York 286
Paris 12
Wexie (Sweden) 15

Previous to the departure of each emigrant, he or she was strictly questioned and was obliged to show excellent reason for the step taken.

When a married man wished to go away alone, we have only given him the means to do so on his presenting us with the written permission of his wife, confirmed by the signature of the Rabbi of his community. We have also carefully avoided sending away married women, unless we had every reason to believe that their husbands, though unable to send them the money to pay their expenses, were nevertheless in a position to provide for their wants on arrival.

A great number of fathers of families as well as single persons had been written to by parents and relatives, stating that they would be provided for at the other side, and it was for this reason that we sent off so many without giving them the funds necessary to create a position for them on landing.

For the matter of that had we followed the advice given to us in all seriousness by a newspaper in New York, and put $100 in each person's pocket before leaving, we would have found ourselves soon forced to give over all idea of carrying out our project.

We make these observations for the purpose of giving a rejoinder to the reproach which was levelled at us by several having sent off emigrants before a Committee was formed in New York, but we may state that all such emigrants were dying of hunger in Europe, and indeed but few did leave, until we knew that they would be met on arriving, for the expedition of the month of March did not set out until we had received from the Alliance an assurance that M. Wolf of Washington would take care of the emigrants.

We wrote directly to M. Wolf ourselves and we found from reports in the American newspapers that our anticipations had been realized; and furthermore that the very fact of the arrival of the emigrants had spurred on the formation of a Committee. But the surest sign of success is, that we are in receipt of almost daily communications from the emigrants, expressing their gratitude and in many cases these same letters enclose money for the purpose of aiding their relatives to rejoin them. These letters can be seen by anyone desirous to test the accuracy of this statement.

Unfortunately more than one emigrant has preferred to remain a burden on his co-religionists than to work, whilst some have not been able to realize fully the expectations of success they formed on starting, but this could not not be prevented by us nor indeed by any Committee of individuals in the world.

Nevertheless we have in concert with the Alliance resolved to cease sending out any more emigrants until such time as a Committee or Committees shall have been definitely formed in the United States. It but remains for us to express a hope that our co-religionists will hasten to come to our assistance, for a delay may lead to great and irreparable evils. More than 1,000 families composing at least 5,000 persons are already inscribed on our emigration-list, and granting that some amongst these people will not pass muster from one cause or another, physical or otherwise, yet there will always remain enough to make us regret the loss of a single day in retaining them in Europe. We can fully understand that our American co-religionists are not over-anxious to see a number of neccessitous brethren flocking over to them. But we would wish them to understand that it is after all but a small contingent and that composed of not the worst members of the Russian Israelites that we can send out, and on arriving they will naturally spread themselves over a wide extent of country and the great majority will find something to do; that even were we not to aid the emigration, a great number would go off of themselves; that we ourselves keep the poorest and the least useful members among ourselves; and finally that these poor emigrants are after all their brothers and that by reason of this title they may claim some support and protection.

Let us add that news has reached us stating that a Committee would soon be formed in America, which glad tidings have been most gratefully received by us, for we desire nothing better than to find ourselves in a position to recommence the work of emigration so happily begun and which comparatively speaking, has led to such excellent and gratifying results.

B.—EDUCATION, PLACING OUT OF APPRENTICES, SCHOOL-BOYS, STUDENTS, ETC.

Following out our programme we have up to the present, with the aid of the Memel and Berlin Committees, put a certain number of young people to school, or to learn trades, paying for them in full or in part.

Whilst waiting until we shall have formed a pretty fair idea of the way in which our co-religionists will assist us in this work, we have been naturally obliged to limit it within certain bounds, for without seeing our way clear before us, it would be wrong in us to put out young people to apprenticeship for three or four years without a certainty of being able to guarantee their existence during that time.

The apprentices and scholars are entirely supported by us. With regard to the apprentices we beg to state that we have always inserted a clause in the contract requiring that they should keep "every Saturday and Holiday strictly." The Sub-Committee upon the members of which devolves the duty of watching over the apprentices, is required to see that the employer as well as his apprentices keep holy the Sabbath. It is also seen that the families into which the apprentices enter are moral and religious.

In order that the apprentices may not be deprived of instruction we have instituted evening classes, and we are happy to state that they are on whole well and regularly attended. We have had a great deal of difficulty at first with the Polish boys, to whom it was next to impossible, to inculcate habits of cleanliness and punctuality, but latterly we have not had to complain of them so much.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

ODESSA.—The Pall Mall Gazette states that a Hungarian paper reports the intended dismissal of General von Kotzebue from the Governor-General of the Crimea, in punishment of his want of energy in suppressing the riots at Odessa, naming as his successor—designate one of the Grand Dukes, Constantine or Michael. It a statement made by the St. Petersburg Exchange Gazette is correct, the appointment of a more energetic governor is urgently required for the population of Southern Russia is hopefully looking forward to some fresh sport in the way of Jew-baiting. "The account of the deeds of the Greeks and inhabitants of Odessa, writes the Gazette, 'arouse wild instincts in the South Russian people and especially in the Cossacks. A new outrage on the Jews is spoken of as imminent. Our population is not remarkable for mildness of temper and there is hardly an atrocity that it may be expected to shrink from.' The Jews, perceiving the hostile dispositions, endeavor to avoid collisions by keeping carefully at home in order not to stir more or exasperate the populace by the sight of them." A correspondent of the paper reports a scene which he witnessed at Tcherassy when the news of the Odessa riots reached that place. The Cossacks in wild excitement at once prepared to imitate their brethren of Odessa, fiercely shouting "Down with the Jews! they have no right!" A gentleman was daring enough to remonstrate on behalf of the Jews who were violently assaulted and narrowly escaped lynching. An extensive conspiracy, having for its object the wholesale massacre of the entire Jewish inhabitants, was discovered; a general panic, we are told, prevails among the Jewish inhabitants.

CRYSTAL PALACE.

ROSSINI'S "STABAT MATER."

We take the following description of a comment from the London Weekly Dispatch, June 18th:

The Saturday Concert, at the Sydenham Palace, was distinguished by an excellent performance of the "Stabat Mater," and the assistance in the miscellaneous portion of Madame Sinico, Madlle. Tietjens, a new soprano, Madlle. Pollitzer, Madame Albini, Signor Vizzani and Agnesi, and Mr. Bentham. Madlle. Tietjens was announced for the "Shadow Song," from "Dinorah," but was absent; and with this single omission the programme was fully carried out. The concert was set down for 3 o'clock, and the punctual Mr. Sinico was in his place at that hour, but at the moment of his assumption of the baton, the "cloud compelling Jove," who had been threatening a downpour for some time, sent such a rattling thundershower on the ridges and furrows, the curves and flat surfaces of the Crystal edifice, that the sound drowned, or would have drowned all others had they attempted rivalry. The rushing of merry and mighty waters, an echo of Niagara was at hand, a hissing as of ten thousand serpents, and a continuous clatter of hail, gave full occupation to the ears and other faculties of the assembled auditory. The storm had no sooner subsided away than the band opened with the wild overture to "Athalie," and this was followed by Rossini's ever attractive, highly colored musical setting of the "Stabat Mater." The solo parts were entrusted to Madlle. Tietjens, Madame Albini, Signor Vizzani and Signor Agnesi, the band was augmented, and the choral parts were sustained by the Crystal Palace choir. The tenor strophe "Ojus Animam" was brilliantly delivered by Signor Vizzani, who in the concluding phrase, reached and held a clear G in alt, and by his graceful delivery of the pathetic passage, earned a merited tribute of applause. The duo, soprano and contralto, "Quis est homo?" Tietjens and Albini brought together the two grandest voices in their class, and two artists of the most matured style. The applause was as strong and hearty as can be given to sacred singing. Signor Agnesi delivered "Pro peccatis," and led the recitative and chorus "Eia mater" with sound discretion and effect. Passing the four-voiced "Sancta Mater," by the four leading singers, we come to the triumph of the cantata, the "Inflammatus," so thrillingly and so solemnly rendered by Tietjens, that had the music been secular there must have been a call or an encore. Of course it would be heterodox, musically and ecclesiastically heretical, but we want so sadly the organ of veneration in the holy-church-sense, that we wish that the "Stabat" would come to a standstill at the sublime "Inflammatus," and spare us the funeral "Quando Corpus," though the final "Amen" should be retained as a choral coda for completeness. The English words given in the book as a translation, do not contain a single sentence of the original. Auber's Exhibition March (1852), followed, and as much was made as possible of what we cannot help thinking the least effective and spontaneous of the venerable composer's works, whose loss we have so recently had to deplore. The miscellaneous portion of the concert calls for scant remark. Madame Sinico was called after the brilliant cantata "Di placer," and applause followed the same lady's "Dove prenda" with Signor Caravoglia. Albini sang the cantata from "La Donna del Lago," with the tokens of past power, and the debutante, Madlle. Pollitzer displayed taste and cultivation, detracted from by nervousness and too large an area for her voice. The concert was well attended.

UNKNOWN FOOD.—Both horse and ass are eaten as food in France and Germany. Mr. Bates, in his "Naturalist on the Amazon," said the meat of the spider monkey was the best flavored he ever tasted. It resembled beef but had a richer and sweeter taste. The predilection for dog-eating is by no means confined to the Chinese; the Equinians, amongst others, vastly enjoy this food when the animals are young. The Malabar colonies are very fond of the "coffee rats," which they fry in oil or convert into curry. The pig rat is in similar favor. It attains a weight of two or three pounds, and grows to nearly the length of two feet. Rat pies are eaten in various parts of England; rat suppers used to be given in periodically at an inn near Nottingham. The porcupine is esteemed a delicacy in Ceylon, and in flavor resembles a young pig. In Siam the flesh of the crocodile is exposed for sale in the markets. Alligators are sometimes eaten by the natives of South America, Africa and South Australia. Kipling's hearts, we are told by Baldwin, in his "African Hunting," are very tender and good. The feet, baked in a hole between bricks, are very glutinous and not unlike brawn. In Peter Martyr's account of the voyages of Columbus, he mentions the disgust experienced by the Spaniards when at St. Domingo, on being invited by the Indians to taste their favorite delicacy, the guano, considering it a species of serpent. Partiality for raw food seems to prevail in many countries. Raw fish, thinly sliced, formed one of the delicacies placed before Lord Elgin at a Chinese banquet. A species of salmon, unknown in Europe, called in Siberia the nelma, is esteemed by the Russians more delicious in its raw state than when cooked, and is eaten to provoke an appetite. Ernan, in his "Travels in Siberia," says that during intense frost raw flesh loses its repulsive qualities. The Arabs eat locusts, and the Greeks eat grasshoppers. The Hot-tentots eat ants; bees are eaten in Ceylon, and mites are eaten by the English.

LONDON JEWS' FREE SCHOOL.—Sir Anthony de Rothschild presided at the 54th anniversary dinner of the Jews' Free School on Monday night, June 12th, at the London Tavern. The chairman, amid great applause, proposed the toast of "Prosperity of the School." The importance of this institution, he said, could not fail to be appreciated when the fact was known that at present there were no less than 1,600 boys and above 1,000 girls in the school. Since the foundation of the institution an education had been given to 13,500 boys and 7,400 girls. The educational staff comprised a head master, twelve assistant teachers and fourteen pupil teachers, and of these eight were graduates or undergraduates of the University of London, and four held certificates of merit under the Privy Council. The girls' school was taught by the head mistress, one principal and eleven ordinary assistant teachers, and sixteen pupil teachers. During the evening subscriptions were announced to the amount of £2,100, of which sum £1,857 appeared on the chairman's list.

Brain associate with the good.—The late Mrs. W. J. Clarke, the daughter-in-law of Mr. W. J. T. Clarke, the wealthiest man in this hemisphere, died in consequence of being severely shaken through the horses in her carriage becoming unmanageable. It is believed that her husband will inherit a sum of nearly three millions sterling, which, invested in the colonies, should realize at least £200,000 per annum.—Melbourne Age.

4. MURDER IN FRANCE.—An attempt at murder in a railway carriage has just been made on the Orleans line. A Spanish gentleman took a seat one evening last week in the coupe of a first-class carriage to proceed to Bayonne; he was at first the only occupant, but just as the train was about to start a stranger entered the same compartment. The two fellow-travellers engaged in a conversation which lasted as far as the Etampes station, when the Spaniard fell into a doze, from which he was presently aroused by two pistol shots fired in the carriage and by feeling a wound in the forehead. A struggle between the men ensued and the would-be murderer being the stronger endeavored to force the other through the window, and would probably have succeeded had not the train at that moment slackened its speed to stop at the Angerville station, when the assailant, fearing to be taken, jumped out of the carriage and escaped. The Spaniard raised a cry of "Stop the murderer!" but too late, as the man was already beyond pursuit. The wounded gentleman was removed to an hotel, at once received surgical assistance. His life is in no danger, as the ball, which appears to have been fired from a very small pocket arm, did not penetrate the bone, and the second shot did not take effect at all.

A GRAVEDIGGERS' STRIKE.—The admirers of trades unions and strikes, who regard these combinations as proper and legitimate means of securing a higher pay than commercial competition or justice will allow, may read with advantage the following: In the midst of the troubles and difficulties which accumulated on the shoulders of the overworked and bewildered municipality of Buenos Ayres during the height of the plague, the serenos and vigilantes (or policemen) struck for higher wages; and the panic having extended to the gravediggers, for many days no one could be found to put the dead under the ground, and the coffins were, therefore, piled up in a stack at the southern cemetery as the hearse and carts brought them in. The scenes at the cemetery were something frightful to behold, and reminded one only of the horrible stories recorded of the plague of London. A large trench was dug, into which the bodies, some coffined, but many merely swathed in bed-clothes, were shot out of the carts and quickly covered with lime. The trench remaining open till it was filled, when another was dug, and the dreadful work recommenced. It is computed that over 20,000 persons found their last resting-place in these pits.

TREASURES FROM OCEAN.—The unhappy catastrophe which overtook the steamer Crescent City, some months ago off Galley Head on the Irish coast, when she sank on her return voyage from New Orleans, being the pioneer vessel of the Liverpool and Mississippi Steamship Line, has led to a notable triumph of science in the diving operations connected with the wreck. The operations were fairly under weigh on the 2d of May, when only two boxes of cotton were raised. On the 9th of June, however, 62 bales were recovered, and about a similar amount on each of the days about this period. Of specie there has been recovered $10,000. It is now fully expected that the whole of the valuable cargo of cotton and specie will be recovered in due time.

WOOD CARPETING.—The Scientific American describes the new wood carpeting, which is coming into extensive use in America, as follows: "The fabric is made of slats or more ornamental shapes, glued or cemented on a cloth backing. The slats or strips of wood are of different colors, and are arranged to produce all the effects of tessellated floors, mosaic work, etc., and being about a quarter of an inch in thickness, they will wear many years. They are finished in oil, and fit together so tightly that the joints are as perfect as those in inlaid work. The surface thus produced can, therefore, be scrubbed, washed, and oiled, and need, precisely like other floors made of ornamental woods, of which floors they resemble in all respects when laid."

ABOUT PEARLS.—It is curious that the nearest cognate substance to the pearl is bezoar—a concretion of deep olive-green color, found in the stomachs of goats, dogs, cows, and especially of camels. The bezoar used to be a valued talisman. The Chinese have for centuries carried on a well organized system of manufacturing pearls. The invention was made early in the thirteenth century, and they still honor the inventor with a temple, acts of ceremonial worship. The French pearls, which excel all others in beauty of imitation, are manufactured, in the first instance, out of the scales of tiny white fish, which abound in the small tributaries of Seine and Marne. It takes from 17,000 to 18,000 fish to make one pearl of the famous essence of oyster.

THE ATTEMPT TO DROWN A MAN IN A WINE-VAT.—James M'Combie was brought before Mr. Lushington for the twelfth time, on Wednesday, June 14th, at the Thames Police Court, London, on remand, charged with violently assaulting James Geddes by attempting to throw him into a vat containing 1,400 gallons of wine. Mr. Charles Young, solicitor, said he was happy to say the injured man was a little better, and he thought it was probable he would be able to attend the court a fortnight hence, and another remand was granted.

A ROYAL THIEF.—There is a curious story going the round of the gossip just now suggesting the plot of a well-known opera. The Empress Augusta, of Germany, has for some months past been greatly troubled by the continued disappearance of her jewels. There was none of her household whom she could suspect, and the police found themselves completely baffled. The thief turned out to be, not indeed, a magpie, but a little child, one of the children of our own Princess Royal, and who had taken a fancy for the ornaments, and had requisitioned them in behalf of her numerous family of dolls.—Leeds Mercury.

Mrs. W. J. Clarke, the daughter-in-law of Mr. W. J. T. Clarke, the wealthiest man in this hemisphere, died in consequence of being severely shaken through the horses in her carriage becoming unmanageable. It is believed that her husband will inherit a sum of nearly three millions sterling, which, invested in the colonies, should realize at least £200,000 per annum.—Melbourne Age.

OUR NATIONAL FASTS.

Only by steady obedience to God's law, by unshaken purity of life, can Israel command the esteem of other nations.

The prophet Isaiah says: "This people have I formed for myself, they shall show forth my praise." To show forth God's praise is the object for the sake of which He has formed us as a people unto Himself. If we realize this object, if our youths and maidens be chaste and holy; if our fathers and mothers lovingly, but firmly, keep their children in the good path; if God's love fills our hearts, if we frequently meditate upon His holy words, then indeed do we prove the matchless nobility of our race. Then, indeed, do we show ourselves the highest among the nations of the earth.

But let us open our eyes and see what passes around us. Do our people so understand their mission? Go forth in the evening and see where you will find the Jewish young men and women. When the labors of the day are ended, whither do they turn their steps?

To the home which a thoughtful mother has made attractive? Ye mothers in Israel! stand forth and declare what ye do to render home pleasant to your children. Heaven has given you almost unbounded influence over the hearts of our offspring. And you will have to give an account of the way in which you have used that influence. It is your province to win the confidence of your children, to make them feel happy at home, to provide them there with harmless, sane, and even holy amusements. Whatever calls forth their admiration of nature's beauties and art's wonders; whatever leads them to think of the marvels by which we are surrounded, or to meditate upon God's Word, that is surely holy.

The mother who loves and fears God, in her heart, who shows that love and fear, not by sanctimonious talking, but by being kind, considerate, watchful and patient, amidst the petty troubles and trials of the household,—that mother is positively revered by her children. Her very presence is to them a source of happiness. But when the mother is frivolously inclined,—when she frets about trifles,—when instead of counseling she perpetually requires to be consoled,—when she can find no delight in the family circle,—when all her ideas of enjoyment lie in frivolous pleasures,—is it to be wondered at that the children go astray, even as a flock whose shepherd has played truant? And you fathers, where are you? You labor hard to support your wives and children. You spare no pains in order to supply all their wants. You even surround them with such luxuries as you can procure, and consider all the burdens that devolve upon you as sweet tasks. All this is only our duty. But why do you stop short? Why do you only look to that which concerns the body, neglecting the wants of the imperishable soul?

It behoves you to see that your children imbibed the fear and love of God when they are young, that they study the Word of God when they grow older. If you use your authority with kind firmness; if you do not from mere caprice needlessly thwart your children's wishes yet never yielding a point of duty; if you make them feel that you are their true friend, that in restraining them you have their best interests at heart, then will their love and respect grow with their growth. When they become young men and women, they will not outgrow your authority, but will listen with deference to your advice, and obey your counsel. But if you are capricious and harsh they will learn to fear, but will never obey you. If they obey, it will be as people obey tyrants—whom they cannot resist. No sooner do they acquire sufficient strength than they throw off the hateful yoke. You will never know, until it is too late, what doubts are agitating their minds,—what temptations are poisoning their hearts. And if you are foolishly indulgent to your children,—in your silly love or proud admiration, you overlook all faults, then you allow pernicious habits to be formed, and to gather strength. When that which was a tender twig becomes a stately tree, it is too late to try to bend its form. It must either stand or fall in the shape which has become part of its nature.

Fathers and mothers! have you thought of these things, and thinking, have you acted accordingly? Go forth and behold the result of your neglect. See men and women who, to all intents and purposes, are but overgrown children. No lofty idea enters their head,—but seldom does a holy emotion thrill in their heart. Far be it from me to forget that there are many noble exceptions, but I speak of the mass. Truly it is, unfortunately, but too true that a large number of our brethren are altogether absorbed in worldliness,—that their amusements are not of a refined and intellectual nature,—that those sacred home-influences for which Israel was anciently famed, are rapidly fading away,—that if the homes be visited evening after evening, it will be found that but seldom do parents and children pass the leisure hours together in innocent and rational conversation, in pursuing some useful or interesting work, or even in reading a portion of the Bible. That was the old-fashioned Jewish way of spending the evenings. During those hours the bonds of love were knit around all hearts. Children opened their hearts to parents; parents soothed and comforted their children. Within the sacred boundaries of the family circle were formed those strong attachments to kith and kin, which in olden times so gloriously distinguished Jewish youths and maidens. But now people would think this mode of life very dull. Their ideas of happiness are mixed up with bright dresses, brilliantly lit rooms, and gay scenes. The eternal future is forgotten in the pleasure of the moment.

Reader! go amongst our brethren, see with your own eyes whether we have overcolored the picture. If, as we fear you will discover, what we say is but a feeble delineation of the reality, then we ask, Have we not reason to feel humiliated and sad?

[TO BE CONCLUDED.]

INSTALLATION.—At a general meeting of the Chebra Berith Schalom, held on Sunday, July 2nd, the following officers were duly installed by Ex-President Bros. A. Morgenstern, assisted by Bro. A. P. Craner and F. Seligman: President, I. N. Choyanski; Vice President, R. S. Calish; Secretary, Louis Licht; Treasurer, J. Witt; Trustees, H. Louis, L. Elias, Isaac Lobres, B. Vogel; Messenger, F. Trieber. After the installation Bro. R. S. Calish was the recipient of an elegant silver set. The presentation was made by the new installed President, Bro. I. N. Choyanski, in a eloquent manner, desecrated upon the services rendered by Brother Ex-President R. S. Calish, to the society. Brother R. S. Calish who was much surprised at the handsome present, returned thanks in a feeling manner.

PRESENTATION.—At the regular meeting, Wednesday last, of Golden Gate Lodge 129, I. O. B. B. The retiring President, Mr. Summerfield, was presented by the Lodge, in acknowledgment of services, with a fine gold-headed cane. Mr. Berry made the presentation speech, which was feelingly answered by the recipient of the present.

GRAND LODGE MEETING.—Sunday next, a meeting of the B'nai B'rith District Grand Lodges No. 4, will be held at the B. B. Hall. The election of a Grand Sopher, to fill the place made vacant by the resignation of Bro. Seldner, will take place.

EXIN SOCIAL CLUB.—The first invitation ball of the Exin Social Club, came off Tuesday evening last, at Pacific Hall, and proved a complete success. The attendance was large, the music fine, and all enjoyed themselves to their hearts' content. It was not till early next morning before the participants wended their way home, all well pleased with this first ball of the Exin's.

In another column of paper this card, signed by many of our most prominent lawyers, will be found, in which they most cordially recommend Judge Deles Lake to the people of this city and county for re-election to the position of Judge of Municipal Criminal Court. We fully concur, as stated in the card, that "while a terror to the evil-doers, Judge Lake has the warmest endorsement of all good members of the community."

In einer anderen Spalte dieses Blattes befindet sich ein Aufruf an die Wähler von San Francisco, unterzeichnet von vielen unserer besten Anwälte, in welchem sie die Wiederwahlung des Richters John A. Stanley bringen empfehlen, da wie es in dem Aufrufe heißt, er die hohen Eigenschaften einer gründlichen Bildung, Unparteilichkeit und Unbestechlichkeit in sich vereinigt mit systematischer und rascher Ausübung seiner Amtspflichten, und durch seine Gerechtigkeit und Zuverlässigkeit gegen Jedermann bekannt ist. Unserer Meinung nach verlangt das öffentliche Interesse seine Wiederwahlung.

METROPOLITAN THEATRE.—An immense audience assembled Monday night last, at the above theatre, to witness the first production of Joe Murphy's special play "Help." The piece abounds in exciting scenes and gives full scope to Joe Murphy's really fine personation of the Irish, German and Negro characters. Great and deserved applause was freely extended to the artist. The Metropolitan Theatre has been crowded nightly since. To-night is set apart for a benefit of Mr. Joe Murphy. Saturday afternoon a Grand Matinee will take place.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Full houses nightly are the rule of this cosy place of amusement. Emerson's splendid impersonations, Vivian's songs, and the clever performances of the Minstrel Troupe constitute an entertainment truly pleasing.

CALIFORNIA THEATRE.—The Lingers presented an attractive programme during the week and were rewarded by full houses.

—Wm. Marx, southeast corner of Sutter and Powell streets, will furnish families with groceries of all kinds and of the best quality.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

[From the Resident Correspondent of THE HEBREW.]

New York, July 4th, 1871.

EDITOR HEBREW:—The glorious Fourth has dawned this morning upon Gotham amidst the roaring of our municipal cannons and our juvenile citizens were awakened to their sport in the shape of fire crackers and other fireworks rather earlier than to adult persons is agreeable. Yet the noise is not as great as in years gone by. The reason therefor is not the abatement of enthusiasts for the American independence day, but to the forbidding by the authorities of using the more dangerous fireworks.

The main topic of conversation during the past week was the Saengerfest of the north eastern Saengerunion. It is a grand spectacle to see several thousand men united and in one chorus hear them sing some of the most inspiring musical themes. Several monster concerts took place at the Empire Rink on Third Avenue and in Steinway hall. There was also prize singing between the different societies and fine premiums to be won. The capacious Steinway hall was overcrowded, not a seat to be had and no room for standing. A person amongst the audience would hardly believe that grown up persons were competing for the prizes. It reminded us of the days gone by, when in one of the lower class of a German Gymnasium (classical seminary) we in silent awe awaited the decision of the faculty, whether we had been promoted to a higher class or not. Just as anxious looked the divers singers. As life or death depended on the issue, they were solemn faces and with anxiety looked upon Messrs. F. L. Ritter, George Matzka, S. P. Warren, F. von Breunig, and H. O. Timm, who had been appointed judges and who sat in front of the singers. The music, vocal as well as instrumental, was masterly. For the second prize competed amongst others the Choral society of Washington, an organization, consisting entirely of American gentlemen, who were unacquainted with the German language and had directly learned the words of the song for this purpose. They gained the second prize in the shape of a piano, valued at $300. The best instrumental music, as acknowledged by all the critics, was furnished by Dr. Leopold Damrosch, who, with his violin and bow, transports his audience to the happy realms of Elysium. The "Germania Maennerchor" of Baltimore, the "Germania Maennerchor" of Philadelphia, were said to have distinguished themselves most next to the "Germania Maennerchor" of Baltimore. Our American fellow citizens look with favor upon these German demonstrations, they tend, like the German "Lied," which they espouse to ennoble heart and soul. Even at the picnic in Jones Wood on the closing day of the festivities all amused themselves with innocent amusements, and the strong hand of the police was not needed to keep order and prevent riot as, we are sorry to say, is generally the case when other nationalities than the Germans have similar demonstrations.

The late conference in Cincinnati has excited the ire of both good reformed and orthodox Jews of this city. The shining light of that convention, Dr. I. M. Wise, has given the lie to historical as well as traditional Judaism, and tried to rob the latter of its All-merciful and Long-suffering God. Query—Why does that reverend doctor so frequently preach about repenting and contrite hearts? What is the use of repenting, if it avails nothing, with a Deity that cannot help punishing the sinner and cannot listen to the entreaty for forgiveness. To us it seems, that the members of that conference, who listened to the Lehrer of Cincinnati and Cleveland rabbis, have only to thank the Long-suffering and All-merciful God, who waits for the return of His erring children, that merited punishment did not meet them on the spot. How true says Holy Writ of Israel: "Are these thy teachers, O, Israel?" Disavow them. Declare before the world that they have the path of the Eternal, remove from their pulpits these dangerous physicians, who wish to instil within your wounds that subtle poison of unbelief, which else will permeate your whole religious body and destroy the sacred heritage of Israel, which your ancestors have preserved intact for you with peril of their lives, and for the preservation of which so many of your forefathers have suffered death in thousand different shapes.

About a week ago, in Albany, New York, was laid the corner-stone for a new capitol of our State. The Jewish community of Albany had been invited to participate actively in the ceremonies. Accordingly they deposited in the box to be placed in the foundation stone, a written document, containing a prayer for the successful prosperity of the citizens of Albany and the State of New York, and a history of the Jewish community of Albany, their different synagogues, charitable societies and a Menzah.

The annual examinations of the different religious schools of this city, as also of the Hebrew Free Schools were held last week, and the results were everywhere gratifying, alike to teachers, pupils and audience. It would be all very well if the children would at the parental home see those precepts practiced; which at those schools are taught to them.

Truly yours, VERITAS.
Pride leads to the destruction of man.

[From the Second Volume of the "History and Literature of the Israelites," by the Messrs. Rothchild.]

A GLANCE AT THE PROPHECY.

II.—MALACHI.

The Book of Malachi embodies some of the latest utterances of prophecy. Although we have no details of the prophet's life, it may be safely concluded from his orations that he was a contemporary of Nehemiah, and wrote about a hundred years after the return of the first colonies from Babylon. For the same effusions and follies which excited the indignation and prompted the exertions of the great statesman, are rebuked by Malachi. At that period of Jewish history, which is contemporary with the latter part of the reign of the Persian king Artaxerxes Longimanus (464-424), extraneous causes were again at work to endanger the morality, and the ever vacillating faith of the people. Freedom from care and immediate perils proved, as usual, a severe temptation. Religious ardor, which past misfortunes had for a time fanned into enthusiasm, was waning away, and was replaced by a fatal indifference to those laws and ordinances which experience had proved to be necessary for the political as well as the religious stability of the commonwealth. The energy and will with which the Temple had been erected, vanished when it was completed; and the sacred rites began to be tainted by the same sanctimony. Moreover the strict isolation which the Jews had attempted after their return from Babylon, was relaxed, and numerous intermarriages with heathen tribes threatened a renewal of all the old dangers of idolatry.

The style of Malachi's orations is peculiar.—As a rule, the prophets conveyed their ideas either in the form of a Divine oracle, a vision, or an allegory, or in a simple address or narrative. But the Book of Malachi teaches by questions and answers, and is almost one continuous dialogue. The questions generally disclose the people's faithlessness and disbelief, and their self-sufficient reliance upon their own excellence. The prophet sometimes rebuts with an emphatic counter-question, but usually rebuts the insolence of the queries by pithy rebukes or severe menace. He thus succeeds in imparting to his speeches a certain dramatic animation and impressiveness, and in placing the ingratitude and constant rebellion of the people in striking contrast to the unbounded mercies and forgiveness of their God.

The character of the Book and the temper of the people are well illustrated in the very opening words: "I have loved you, says the Lord; yet you say, Wherein hast thou loved us?—Was not Esau Jacob's brother? says the Lord; yet I loved Jacob, and hated Esau, and laid waste his mountains, and made his heritage abodes of the wilderness." Israel had been favored beyond his merits, but refused to own it. God's reply involves indeed censure, but it is tempered by indulgence; He is sure that the people will, in due time, recognize His untiring compassion—"Your eyes shall see it, and you shall say, Great is the Lord beyond the boundaries of Israel."

Like many of his predecessors, Malachi attributes the deplorable state of the commonwealth to the recklessness and indifference of its leaders, or the priests, who after the Babylonian period had acquired unusual power. To them, therefore, he addresses his reproaches. "A son honors his father, and a servant his master; if then I be a father, where is my honor? if then I be a master, where is my fear? says the Lord of hosts to you, O priests that despise My name. And you say, Wherein have we despised Thy name? You offer polluted bread upon My altar; and you say, Wherein have we polluted Thee? in that you say, The Table of the Lord is contemptible. And if you offer the blind for sacrifice, is it not evil? and if you offer the lame and sick, is it not evil? Offer it to thy governor; will he be pleased with thee, or accept thy person? says the Lord of hosts. And now I pray you, beseech God that He will be gracious to us: this has been by your means—will He regard your persons? says the Lord of hosts." Then he chastises the negligence with which the priestly functions were performed, the cupidity of withholding the firstlings from their sacred destination, and the irreverence of presenting on the altar of God maimed and worthless beasts. In reviewing these offences, he is unable to restrain his wrath: "Cursed be the deceiver that has in his flock a male, and vows and sacrifices a faulty female; for I am a great King, says the Lord of hosts, and My name is dreaded among the nations." He then contrasts the noble mission of the priests with their contemptible conduct, and the happy influence they ought to exercise with the baneful effects of their headlessness. "My covenant was with him for fear or peace; and I gave them to him for the fear wherewith he feared Me, and revered My name. The law of truth was in his mouth, and iniquity was not found in his lips; he walked with Me in peace and equity, and turned away from iniquity. For the priest's lips should keep knowledge, and they should seek the law at his mouth; for he is the messenger of the Lord of hosts." The true priest, as Malachi pictured him in his mind, leads a life of peace and usefulness, tries to improve and encourage the people, and finds other duties to perform besides those connected with sacrifice and religious ceremonies. But the whole order had deserted its high vocation, and proved unworthy of the sacred offices entrusted to its care. "You have swerved from the way; you have caused many to stumble at the Law; you have corrupted the covenant of Levi, says the Lord of hosts." But punishment and humiliation are announced as inevitable. "Therefore will I also make you contemptible and base before all the people, since you have not kept My ways, but have been partial in the Law. If you will not hear, and if you will not lay it to heart, to give glory to My name, says the Lord of hosts, I will surely send a curse upon you, and I will curse your blessings; yea, I have cursed them already, because you do not lay it to heart."

Then the prophet inveighed against the people themselves, and especially against their intermarriages with heathen nations. He started indeed with the principle, "Have we not all one Father? has not one God created us?" Yet he intimated, that an indiscriminate intercourse between those who believe in Him and those who do not, is "a profanation of the holiness of the Lord," fraught with serious evils, since the young and still unsettled colony was sure to be endangered by the infusion of heathen elements. But with even greater earnestness the prophet denounced the levity with which husbands seem to have divorced their wives; and he declared, that because the House of God was filled with the cries and weeping of discarded women, the Lord rejected the people's sacrifices and prayers. To palliate their frivolity, they quoted the example of Abraham, who sent away Hagar; but the prophet replied that Abraham was in an exceptional condition which obliged him to act as he did—"that he might seek a godly seed;" and he added, "Therefore take heed of your souls, and let none deal treacherously against the wife of youth; for the Lord, the God of Israel, says that He hates divorcing."

The habitual disregard of God's commands resulted in callousness, which recognized no duties and dreaded no punishments: "You have wearied the Lord with your words; yet you say, Wherein have we wearied Him? When you say, Everyone that does evil pleases the Lord, and He delights in them; or, Where is the Lord of justice?"

But the day of judgment approaches, God appears to pronounce sentence upon the righteous and the wicked, and He sends His messenger to execute it. This messenger will be like the fire of the refiner, which burns out all dross, and removes all alloy. He will bring terror and destruction upon all evil-doers, but relief and salvation to the innocent. "And I am come to you for judgment, and I am a swift witness against the seerers and against false swearers, and against those that oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow and the fatherless, and that turn aside the stranger from his right, and fear not Me, says the Lord of hosts." But when the time of retribution is completed, peace and happiness will prevail forever: "Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant to the Lord, as in the days of old, and as in former years."

After reproving the people for their "spoliation of the Lord" in not paying the tithes and other imposts, the prophet turns once more to the impending chastisement, which calls forth his furthest eloquence. He is unable to understand the hardness and folly which presume to question the justice of God, expect prosperity from a life of sin, and declare virtue unavailing for happiness. But the day is near when the scoffers will tremble, and their eyes will be opened. It will be a terrible time: "Behold, the day comes, burning as an oven; then all the proud and all the evil-doers shall be stubble, and the day that comes shall burn them up, says the Lord of hosts, and shall leave them neither root nor branch." "But," he continues, "to you that fear My name shall the sun of righteousness arise with healing on his wings; and you shall go forth and bound as calves of the stall." However, some preparation was to precede the awful judgment, for the weakness of man claims compassion and indulgence. Therefore Malachi declares, that God will send another messenger to precede the dreaded requiter of good and evil; and a great prophet like Elijah will re-appear to restore peace and good-will among men, and appease God's anger; he will "turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to the fathers."

With these allusions to a bright future, Malachi closes his orations. Throughout the book, he avoids doctrinal questions, and advocates with much earnestness a simple and elevated code of morality; his plain and appropriate language, if not enriched with striking simile, no displaying sublime flights of oratory, as free from obscurity and fantastic imagery.

LOS ANGELES.—A fatal accident occurred a few days ago in our city, by which the little son of our co-religionist, Mr. Samuel Hellman, was suddenly deprived of life. We understand that the little fellow, who was only about five years old, was playing with a brother a little older, on Main street, near Second, when a heavy truck, belonging to John Jones, passed along, and on which the two children at once jumped for a ride. The driver stopped the truck, and made them get off, but as soon as his back was turned, they climbed up again. Thinking the children out of the way, the truckman whipped his horses into a trot; when near Third street, he heard a cry, and looking back, saw the child lying in the road, and supposed that it had fallen from the rear end of the truck, as children do frequently fall in getting off. When the poor little fellow was picked up, it was found that one of the wheels of the truck had passed over his body, and that he was dying. In a few moments the soul left its earthly tenement, and only a corpse remained of what had so short a time before been a bright and happy child. The afflicted parents have the sympathies of the entire community in this their sudden and most melancholy bereavement.

LOS ANGELES.—At the celebration of the Fourth of July, Rev. Edelman of our Jewish Congregation, pronounced after the usual oration a very solemn and impressive benediction, which was listened to by the whole audience with great attention.

LOS ANGELES.—At a meeting of the Hebrew Benevolent Society, the following officers were elected to serve for one year: S. Lazard, President; Sam. Meyer, Vice President; L. Leeb, Secretary; Michel Levy, Treasurer; S. Benjamin, J. M. Hellman, A. W. Edelman, Trustees.

OPERA BOUFFE.—Maguire's Opera House last night was crowded, the occasion being the opening night of Fisk's Grand Opera Bouffe Troupe. "Barbe Bleue," was given. Mlle. Lea Silly, the prima donna, as Juliette, carried off the honors of the evening; her acting was grand, and her singing very fine indeed. Mons. Felix Girrbek, as Barbe Bleue, acted and sang well. The minor characters were all satisfactory represented. Great applause ended many bouquets, and baskets of flowers rewarded the artists. Saturday afternoon a grand Barbe Bleue Matinee will be given.

We hear that the name of Mr. E. Peck is mentioned as candidate for Sheriff on the Republican Ticket. Mr. Peck is well and favorably known in our community; he is in every way qualified for the position, and would prove a strong card on the ticket.

A FEW WORDS TO THE LADIES.

Many ladies, particularly mothers nursing, complain of a tired, listless feeling, or complete exhaustion, on arising in the morning. On the wife and mother devolves the responsibility of regulating the duties of the household. Her cares are numerous, and the mental as well as the physical powers are frequently called into requisition. She often finds her slightest occupation a weary task and existence a burden, while at the same time she has no regular disease. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, if resorted to at this period, will prove an unfailing remedy for this annoying lassitude. The effects of this potent agent are soon seen in the rosy cheek and elastic step of the head of the family, as with restored health and renewed spirits she takes her accustomed place in the family circle. If this friend in need be regularly used, those depressing symptoms will never be complained of, and not only would lassitude not be experienced, but many diseases following its advent be avoided. As a medical agent it has no equal, while its pleasing flavor and healthful effects have made it a general favorite. It is free from all properties calculated to impair the system, and its operations are at once mild, soothing and efficient. All who have used the Bitters attest its virtues and commend it to use.

The "PAIN KILLER" may justly be styled the great medicine of the world, for there is no region of the globe into which it has not found its way, and been largely used and highly prized. Moreover, there is no climate to which it has not proved to be well adapted for the cure of a considerable variety of diseases; it is a speedy and safe remedy for burns, scalds, cuts, bruises, wounds and various other injuries, as well as for dysentery, diarrhea, and bowel complaints generally. It is admirably suited for every race of men on the face of the globe.

It is a very significant fact, that notwithstanding the long period of years that the "Pain Killer" has been before the world, it has never lost one whit of its popularity, but, on the contrary, the call for it has steadily increased from its first discovery, and at no previous time has the demand for it been so great, or the quantity made so large, as it is to-day.

Another significant fact is, that nowhere has the Pain Killer ever been in higher repute, or been more generally used by families and individuals, than it has been here at San Francisco, where it was first discovered and introduced. That the Pain Killer will continue to be, what we have styled it, THE GREAT MEDICINE OF THE WORLD, there cannot be the shadow of a doubt.—[Providence Advertiser.]

INCIDENT OF THE FRANCO-PRUSSIAN WAR. The A. Z. d. J. communicates the following, under the heading "A True History." The soldier S., from L., in Baden, has in his native place a niece of about nine years. This girl is very fond of him, and refused, during the war, to eat anything that could be sent to her uncle, at the seat of war. In the month of September the Baden troops were lying before Strasburg, and one day, our S. K., exhausted by heavy exercise, lay down and rested his head on a stone, which seemed to him to be softer than a downy pillow. He fell immediately asleep, and dreamt that his little niece was calling out to him: "Samuel, Samuel!" He became frightened, jumped up and seated himself, drowsy as he was, on another stone. At the very same moment a granite exploded, and the debris thereof fell on the same stone from which the dream-of-exclamation of his niece had removed him.

RUSSIA.—A circular of the Russian Minister calls the attention of the governors to the patriotic conduct of the Jews of Germany and France during the past year. It is, observes the Minister, the result of the fusion of the Jews of those countries with the other sections of the population. He urges the Russian authorities, therefore, to exert themselves to withdraw the Russian Jews from their isolated habits, and thus to amalgamate them with the rest of the nation.

A SLIGHT COLD, COUGHS.—Few are aware of the importance of checking a cough or "slight cold" in its first stage; that which in the beginning would yield to a mild remedy, if neglected, often attacks the lungs. "Brown's Bronchial Troches" give sure and almost immediate relief. "The Troches" have proved their efficacy by a test of many years, and have received testimonials from eminent men who have used them.

DR. SAGE'S CATARRH REMEDY produces perfect cures of the worst cases of Catarrh. "Cold in the Head," Coriza and Catarrhal Headache, as hundreds of testimonials from well known citizens and eminent physicians who have used it in their practice abundantly testify. It is mild, pleasant and unirritating. The proprietor offers $500 for a case of Catarrh that he cannot cure. Sent to any address by mail on receipt of sixty cents. Address R. V. Pierce, M.D., 133 Seneca street, Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by druggists. Remember that Dr. Pierce's private Government Revenue Stamp is on every package of the Genuine.

DUFF & CO., Commission Merchants, No. 316 Davis street, have always all kinds of California and Oregon produce on hand, and sell them very cheap.

The Pioneer Spring Factory of C. D. Hinkleley, No. 75 New Montgomery street, produces the best and most durable springs. Everyone who is in need of springs should buy them.

REMOVAL.—Messrs. Mitchell & Bell the well known Carpet Dealers, have removed to the extensive ware-rooms 314 and 316 Pine street, where they will be pleased to see their old friends and customers.

WINDOW SHADES.—We were shown lately, at the Manufactory of Messrs. Holliman & Burbridge, 617 Mission street, a very fine new Window Shade, called the "Rustic." This shade combines elegance and durability with cheapness, and is surely the most serviceable in the market.

Dealers in the interior, who wish to buy Guns, Rifles, Pistols, Ammunition etc. of every description, will find it to their benefit to call or address to A. J. Plate, 510 Sacramento street.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs,

such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping

Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform cures of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear. Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever,

Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb

Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c.,

and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it in no wise injures any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the ague districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicine.

Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed.

Unaccompanied persons, either resident in, or travelling through malarious localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed. Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all round the world.
